FPAN will be bringing ARCHAEO CART to this expo!

For information

A sea of scholars is forming as teachers and students come to grips with public archaeology. It isn't just about the classroom – it's community outreach too. If you've always wondered what Anthropology is all about, this is your chance to experience it! The Florida Public Archaeology Network (FPAN) is a non-profit 501(c)(3) that engages students and the community in the archaeology of Florida.

During Facilitator Training, Amber and I have been working on the newest component to Project Archaeology's Investigating Shelter module for teachers. The module focuses on teaching children the Sunshine State Standards (NGSSS) that specifically address Florida's past and present. We are working with Florida Council of Teachers of Science and Florida Association for Science to create professional development workshops for teachers.

In the classroom, the challenge is to find the right mix of resources that can make learning archaeology fun and accessible. Teachers are always looking for the perfect experience to engage their students. FPAN is there to help! We've just finished the development of ARCHAEO CART – a 4-wheeler device that allows teachers and their students to experience archaeology out of the museum and exposing it to a wider demographic. For the first time ever, we are bringing the cart to this expo! We are hoping to expand the cart's software program as well as trainings in Sarasota, Manatee, and Hillsborough counties.

Over the last year, Driftwood Update: Lab work is Underway! We have been working on the Driftwood module for Project Archaeology's Investigating Shelter module. We have completed testing the module with teachers and students from across the state. Now that FPAN's staff has gone through Facilitator Training, we are preparing for the launch of ARCHAEO CART and the development of a series of workshops and trainings.

While we use this Annual Work Plan as a way to prioritize different activities in the annual plan. They include: assisting in the coordination of and pop-ins happen. Although we have yet to break into a classroom, you have reached those who can count on spending three days in the lab, and I could...
